Robespierre was locked up in the former-Chouan convent in Exile in Marseille, on the coast of the Mediterranean Sea, for a few days, before being found in the neighboring village of Phalsbourg by Vichy officials and taken to the prison at Narbonne. "John Roffey John Roffey (1796 – 1858) was an English architect, urban planner, and designer of Royal residences in the Victorian era. He was also an antiquarian, collector of drawings, and publisher of architectural papers. Life and work Roffey was born in 1796 in London, the first son of Joseph Roffey, a retired Liverpool apothecary, and Sarah Deacon. He was articulated to architect James Burton II in about 1817, becoming his chief assistant, and was admitted a partner in 1822. The Burton business, based at 8 and 10 Chesham Street, was concerned with monuments and church fittings. After about ten years in practice they were joined by Roffey, who was to take the more lucrative ornaments and decorations side. The firm specialised in "observant pomposity", as 1cdb3666d on the whole, they are just shy of stating which players are free agents. There are two lines in the "to make free agent list" document that state: "Players with 10 games of NBA experience, or who have been called up to the NBA in the final two weeks of the regular season, are automatically added to the league's free agent list. Under the NBA's collective bargaining agreement with its players' association, the league automatically bestows free agency status on all players who reach that status on July 1 of the year in which they turned 20 years old. If players in their first year of eligibility play in less than 10 games during the regular season or if they are waived from a team's roster for the final two weeks of the regular season without being offered a contract, they are on that list." So the Mavs have no claim to any of the players on this list. At least not until they go through the draft and see who is left after the Mavs have also signed their free agents. That's the only way I see them having any claim to any of the players on this list. The only way the Mavs can be a title contender this year is by improving their bench so that they have a top 15 or 16, but they have a tough road to getting there. That's the one area where we have to be thankful because it keeps us from sweating about our 1st round picks from last year. The Mavs have a lot of work to do, but a lot of good things happened last season. "I don't know much about chemistry, but I do know that bubble bath is in order," Colbert declared. "It's been a long week." "Sorry," Colbert continued, "this was the only shower I could get to, because I wanted to say goodbye to the nation. It has been a crazy week. As a patriotic American, I feel as though I will never wash my hair again." Colbert then turned to the audience and quipped: "I'm not brave enough to go up to those flames."

The comedian's show was seen by an estimated 44 million viewers last night.<sup>10</sup> reasons why the £350,000 buyout was a big mistake 1. It was an act of desperation

In an interview with the Guardian, Ralph Miliband, son of former Labour leader, Harold, sums up the episode saying: "We cannot put our heads in the sand. The housing crisis is the deep structural problem of capitalism and the next generation can only be shaped if they can see it." Well Ralph, what is capitalism? It's where money - as your dad may have put it - swells a self-consuming cycle of growth, debt and benefit dependence for the few. What kind of a 'society' are we building? It's not any kind of society - just a bleak and broken one. 2. Playing Party Politics On another front, I can think of many, many reasons why Labour Party members shouldn't be getting into an argument with their fellow party members on Twitter over a £350,000 pay-out for some rabid Brexiteers: but, please, let's not go there, otherwise we might never get on the road to a better future. 3. JASPER KIDD Yes, we have an awful lot of focus on what is meant to be a rather old-fashioned, mildly amusing fictional character, but this guy represents something far more sinister. He's the public face of a
